You probably have several life insurance policies. Most people do. But what do they all add up to?

An Imperial Life man will analyze them for you. He'll discuss with you your present and future needs. How well you have already looked after them. Family protection. Retirement. Disability income.

He receives extensive training and has on call a team of lawyers, accountants, estate planning

After his initial training we keep him continually informed on all the new developments. He knows about Registered Savings Plans. Government pension plans. How your company group benefits work. Tax laws. And so on.

In short, we try to give him a background in all the elements that should fit into your total estate plan. That way, when an Imperial Life man talks to you, he's equipped to see the whole picture. And he can recommend a program that fits into it

That's our definition of a good insurance program. And it takes a good insurance man to design that kind of program. An Imperial Life man.

City Beauty Is Public Property

It will be a pity if the proposal for stricter control of the appearance of apartment and condominium buildings becomes bogged down in an architect versus non-architect controversy. That aspect of the problem is merely concerned with the means of control and the manner of advisory service. What is at stake is the appearance of the urban environment which is being created in Victoria. That is too important a matter to permit it to be obscured in a professional wrangle.

To the fire, health and other regulations which now govern building construction in the city should be added some means of ensuring that high standards of appearance will be upheld. There are enough bad examples around the town to illustrate the need for some supervisory body with the necessary powers.

What should be kept in mind, by City Council and the public, is that each new building is not a separate entity having no bearing on its surroundings. Each new structure is a new piece of Victoria, and there should be guidance - and more than guidance if necessary — for all who set out to add to the physical appearance of the commu-

The present advisory design panel of the city performs an important function. But authority is needed whereby a decision can be enforced when this becomes necessary. Admittedly, esthetic judgment in building design is a wide open subject; there is always room for disagreement on one ground or another. Imagination and "newness" should not be discouraged. But there are levels of mediocrity that are apparent to almost everyone, most often displayed in the nondescript box-like structures that too frequently dot the city landscape.

Escape from this type of construction may not be possible merely through advice; there may well have to be teeth in the bylaw so that higher standards may be required. The esthetic judgments may not necessarily be made only by professional architects, although these obviously must play a leading part. Other designers and engineers should also have a say, provided they apply esthetic criteria along with their engineering and economic viewpoints.

It should not be long, under such auspices, before certain standards of appearance and suitability would become established, to serve as guidelines for future edecisions. Gradually a body of standards could be assembled, flexible and open to new ideas, but preserving a recognizable basis of quality which this city deserves and should be guaranteed.

". . . I always try to appear warm, loving, well-adjusted and happy when I walk through this section of town . . . gives them something to think about . . ."

The Warheads Mount

President Nixon has flown back to the hornet's nest that is Washington these days with little to boast about after a week-long summit meeting in Moscow. Although the president must be faulted at home, his mission to slow or halt the nuclear arms race is praiseworthy. But old suspicions die hard and Leonid Brezhnev was not about to bury his offensive missiles — an attitude perhaps conditioned in part by the positioning of Chinese intermédiate range

Dancing in the Dark

When an artist defects to the West from the Soviet Union it makes headlines in Europe, and North America because of the political implications. The West plays the story up as a victory for our side and the East immediately starts a campaign to discredit the defecting artist. In most cases the defectors are not overtly political.

Rudolph Nureyev, who came West in 1961, said he doesn't care about American or Russian politics, dance is the only thing. When author Alexandr Solzhenitsyn was expelled from the Soviet Union he was almost as vocal about decadent democracy as he was about the Russian police state. Now Mikhail Barichnikov, a leading dancer with the Leningrad Kirov Ballet, has defected in Toronto. His reasons for such a momentous step have not been revealed. But once again his motivation may prove to be personal rather than political. Despite a fairly luxurious life, Soviet artists don't have artistic or personal freedom. The state decides the dancer's roles; the writer must submit his work to censors.

In the West artistic success is often equated with commercial success, and the crassest examples of bad taste sometimes win the greatest applause. But here government rules only on obscenity, and it is even trying to get out of that field. Artists can do whatever they wish. Often they are even aided financially by the govern-cut back underground nuclear testing and anti-ballistic missile deployment represents progress in a world where the superpowers are still in the attitude of armed camps. But limiting anti-missile missiles when both superpowers number their offensive missiles in the thousands is like banning hand guns in a war fought with machine guns. U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger underlined the urgency of the issue when he said, "If we do not solve this problem by 1977, we will be living in a world in which opportunities for nuclear war exist which are unimagina-

But until the superpowers abandon their fleets of destruction, the smaller nuclear powers will feel no compulsion to stop development of their own deterrents.

Summits and SALT meetings will continue chipping away at the horrendous arsenals of both superpowers. Without a decisive disarmament advance in this decade Mr. Kissinger's words might become an epitaph rather than a

When Is a Wife Not a Wife?

TORONTO - The idea that marriage is an economic partnership has little or no basis in Canadian law. Many spouses may so regard it in practice but the law insists they are legal strangers, unless specific arrangements are made to the contrary. As far as property is concerned - and that includes money marriage is a "his" and "hers" proposi-

What this means, for the majority of wives, is that marriage is a nothing proposition. A wife owns whatever she may bring to the marriage and whatever she may earn "privately," but she has no automatic claim, other than for the necessaries of life, on her husband's earnings or assets. "Just being a wife" gets you nowhere.

The law has been like that for a long time (it used to be worse: a husband at one time automatically acquired his wife's property) but it apparently took last year's famous case of Murdoch vs. Murdoch to wake wives up to the legal

Majority Opinion

In that case, the Supreme Court of Canada by majority opinion upheld a trial judge's ruling that Mrs. Irene Murdoch, on being separated from her husband after 30 years of marriage, was not entitled to any beneficial interest in his Alberta ranch and farmbouse. The contribution she had made to his ranching business over the 30 years, the trial judge held, was no more than what would have been done "by any ranch wife"—an unhappy phrase which probably did more to draw attention to the case than the legal issues involved.

Actually, the Murdoch case was only a confirmation of a position taken years earlier by the Supreme Court in a more fundamental case, Thompson vs. Thompson. This was a 1961 case in which the court put a stop to a trend which had been developing wherein the courts were evolving, by judicial decisions in specific cases, a legal basis for the idea that marriage is indeed an economic partnership, in addition to whatever else it between husband and wife as to the title to or possession of property, a Supreme Court judge "may make such order with respect to the property in dispute as he thinks fit." Other provinces have similar provisions, and the courts were using the discretion thus afforded them to ameliorate the harshness of the law that a wife has no automatic or inherent right to a share in the family assets.

In Thompson vs. Thompson, the Supreme Court said this would have to stop because the courts were doing the legis

riage lasted, however, continued in

The Ontario commission had the benefit of the Murdoch case in writing its report and argued that its recomm dations, if accepted, would meet that particular problem. This no doubt is true but it has not satisfied the women liberationists, and the Ontario government is now in a very ticklish situation.

Coequals on Divorce

For most marriages, a legislative scheme which treats the parties as coequals on the dissolution of the marriage is adequate, since for most spouses it is only on dissolution that a problem arises. In effect, the Law Reform Commission provided for this majority in its recommendations. But the women libbers are clearly not going to be satisfied with a scheme that regards marriage as an economic partnership only for the purpose of distributing assets if and when the marriage ends; they want it to be an economic partnership in law while it lasts. This sounds fair enough but it creates all kinds of horrendous legal knots which no one at this stage knows how to untie. The government's own Council on the Status of Women has insisted that nothing major be done until a conference of heard from. Council chairman Laura Sabia has perhaps given an indication of what may be in store by declaring: "We don't want any more men making legislation for women

In the meantime, the government has introduced, for informational purposes only, draft legislation to correct some deficiencies in the law, including in particular the problem posed by the Murdoch case. Its proposal is that the courts be directed to regard a wife in such a situation as a non-wife; that is, she should be regarded as a third-party who had contributed to the success of her hugband's business and be compensated accordingly.

Just where that gets us is a conundrum. How would the courts be able to value the contribution a woman makes to her husband's business, by virtue of being his wife, if they have to assume she was not his wife?

Perhaps Mrs. Sabia has a point.

Bill 22, the Quebec Official Language Act, rejects the Canadian federal concept of bilingualism. It promotes the French language in Quebec and restricts the use of English. It provides no guarantee for the cultural survival of the English community in Quebec, but aims at a French-only state.

Chapter V of Bill 22 destroys the traditional two-language educational system that has been in Quebec since before Confederation. It makes French the language of instruction of all public schools; henceforth English may be a language of instruction subject to the approval of the minister of education. It deprives the parent of his choice of English or French language schools. Henceforth pupils will be tested to see if they are genuine anglophones. If they do not pass the language test, they will have to attend French schools.

Bill 22 establishes a language board to ascertain the "francization" (frenchness) of all businesses. Certificates of francization will be required for business firms to receive "permits, premiums, subsidies, concessions from the public administration" (article 33). This strikes at the very heart of the normal business ethic in Canada, and makes language a major criterion for business activity.

All notices, labelling, signposting, electric signs, etc., must be in French; public and professional bodies must conduct their correspondence in French. When accompanied by an English version, only the French version is the official authentic one.

These are merely a few of the 130 articles of Bill 22 - the comprehensiveness of which can only be understood when the bill is gone over in its entirety. It is a thoroughly racist bill, intent on the elimination of the English-speaking community from the province of Quebec.

The supposed rationale for this bill is that French is in danger of disappearing from Quebec. Those of us who live here know that this is a myth ably used by the French nationalists and unilingualists. The truth is that French has never been in such a strong position in Quebec as it is today. - Mrs. Winnifred Potter, 2285 Cambridge Rd., Montreal,

Along the Frontier of Terror

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. biggest remaining obstacle to a Middle East peace and to the consolidation of American influence in the Arab world is now only too apparent. It is the continu mini-war between Israel and the Palestinian fedayeen.

How to disengage these residual belligerents is the problem preoccupying Mideast diplomacy. It will not be easy. Conventional armed forces can be separated: but how do you separate terrorists from bomb-carrying aircraft?

The first impulse of peacemakers. especially here at UN headquarters, is to the instrument which has successfully disengaged Syrian and Egyptian forces from Israeli lines: the UN peace army.

It is being suggested that this force enlarged and deployed along the Israeli-Lebanese frontier, across which many of the guerrilla raiders into Israel apparently come.

But this raises two practical difficul-

Thin Blue Line

• If a powerful Israeli defence force. backed by police and civil defence units, cannot intercept all terrorists, how could it be thought that a thin blue line of lightly armed UN troops could do so?

• And even if it could - even, for example, if the electronic fence now being constructed by Israel along the Lebanese-Israeli frontier were to make the job feasible - what about raiders coming from the sea? The team of three terrorists who shot up an apartment in Nahariya June 24-25 are belfeved to have come by that route.

There is also a legal problem, UN armies are neutral forces; they are not and must not seem to be - adjuncts to the armed forces of one side

A UN army which inhibited the Palestinians, but had no capability to curb Israeli air raids or artillery fire against Lebanon, would not be seen to be neutral reprisals might have been removed). It could not win authorization from a UN political body.

The basic rule of thumb previously applied to UN peace armies is applicable here: that a UN force can be effective, not against the wishes of the parties to a conflict, but only in co-operation with

This means that both the Israelis and

Under Tension

the Palestinians would first have to be willing to disengage. Then the UN could provide a face-saving means of carrying out that decision. So the key to separating Israel and the Palestinians will be a political bargain which a UN force may help to execute. And already diplomats are exploring the possibilities of such a bargain.

Three principal elements are envisaged: an agreement to suspend hostilities - both terror raids and reprisals;

a UN patrol to symbolize and facilitate the carrying out of that agreement; and Israeli willingness to discuss at Geneva with the Palestinian guerrilla leaders, a West Bank Republic of Palestine.

While such a bargain is being worked out, each of the belligerents apparently is going to "fight and talk," that is, bolster its bargaining position by demonstrating strength. Hence terror raids reprisals and pre-emptive strikes: Lebanese anti-aircraft purchases, and Palestinian bomb-shelter

The tragedy is that the more violence there is, the harder it becomes to negotiate a political accord. The more terror raids there are, the greater is Israel's resolve to keep fedayeen leaders from pre-empting political power in a post war Arab Palestine - which they might well do if they were accepted by Israel now as negotiating partners.

Professing Outrage

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union, professing outrage at Israel's reprisals and bombarding her with abuse and diplo matic pressure, is regaining some of the standing it had lost in the Arab world. If Moscow could further manoeuvre the United States into vetoing a UN condemnation of Israel's air raids, these Soviet gains would be multiplied.

There are Machiavellian minds here who think Moscow is inciting the Palestinians into repeated acts of terrorism, knowing there will be Israeli reprisals and expecting that in the aftermath, the United States will damage itself in the Arab world by siding, at least in part, with Israel. However this may be, there is rapidly evolving a new situation in which violence and turmoil once again are tempting the Arabs (including even some Lenese) to turn to the Soviet Union for diplomatic and military help. Gains scored by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in the area are in very real

Nikita's Memoirs: 'I Was Wrong'

WASHINGTON - The Khrushchev memoirs are full of evasion, distortions, delibomissions, contradictions, downright lies. This is acknowledged in the foreword to the second volume of the memoirs, newly published in the United States. Yet it was the presence of these in the first volume that gave rise to the suspicion that the book was a forgery when it was published more than three.

One theory was that the book had been produced by the disinformation depart-ment of the KGB as part of ment of the KGB as part of the Kremlin's psychological warfare against the West. The other theory, the foreword re-calls, belonged to "one well-known journalist who argued passionately and at length, that the whole narrative had been fabricated by a special jeam of fakers operating with-in the CIA."

His analysis, presented in a series of articles published at the time throughout the world, still feeds some of the lcontinuing doubts about the authenticity of the memoirs.

The argument about the KGB role was supported by such scholars as Professor, Jeonard Schapiro, of the London School of Economics, one of the West's leading authorities on Soviet History, "I cannot imagine Khrushchev saying this, even in private," he wrote, "let alone for publication cheed."

The view about the CIA role was based on similar reason-ing, Khrushchev could not possibly have said these things, the argument ran, but the contents of the book seemed calculated to discredit the Soviet regime. They are bound to create difficulties for the Kremlin in ways which would have been of benefit to the United States. The CIA had published anti-Soviet forgeries before, and now the

KHRUSHCHEV . . . A SKEPTICAL EXPERT RECANTS

Khrushchev had been top-pled as the ruler of the Soviet Union. His successors consigned him to oblivion, banned all mention of him from the press, and virtually succeeded in making him an "unperson." He, determined get out his own story, die tated his reminiscences arranged for their publication in the West In the foreward Edward Crankshaw, himself a well-known journalist, charitably refrains from naming the "well-known journalist" whose elaborate analysis claimed that the book was a CIA forgery. But the matter should not be allowed to rest

The old Fleet Street principle that "dog does not eat dog," that newspapers and journalists do not attack each other, ought not to prevail other, ought not to prevail where an error of judgment requires correction. This is especially so in the present case, since the original analysis tracing the Khrushchev memoirs to the CIA seemed so impressive that it was widely commented on throughout the world, and is still accepted by some people. The journalist in question continues to be regarded as something of an authority on Communist affairs. Difficult as he may find it to make an admission of error which is bound to reflect on the quality of his work, he owes it to his readers to do so.

The fact is that journalists do make mistakes, and it is necessary that from time to time they should admit them not in passing, not with a coy throw-away phrase, but in a detailed article that would re-call the full circumstances of the original error, as this article has done, for the "well-known journalist" whom Edward Crankshaw forbore to name was myself.

Chou's Health Worries China

PEKING - As Canadians go to the polls today to decide the fate of their prime minister, the people of China will be entertaining concerns of a different order about the head of their government. Chou Enlai, who has steered the country through its first quarter century of socialism, may be a sicker man than news agency disclosed the 76year-old premier, who first revealed his illness two carried in the People's Daily, is the first official word that the Cinese people have had that the premier's health is in

As is often the case with disclosures of the first importance in China, this one was tucked away in a routine account of the premier's meet-ting on Friday with Senator Henry Jackson. In the body of the story, almost as though it an incidental matte was the fact that the meeting took place "in a hospital."

ness before Chou let the world know about it in May, the story would come as no sur-prise. But to hundreds of millions of people who rely on the party press for all their information on the leaders, it would cause distress second only to the actual demise of the premier or of the man whose right hand he has been all these years, Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

For this reason alone, the decision to go public with the fact of the premier's hospital-ization was extraordinary. In times gone by, any reference in the press to the illness of one of the party principals would have been unimaging able. Indeed, the taboo was such that a correspondent might expect an official rebuke if he indulged in what the foreign might be designed in the control of the c the foreign ministry describes as "rumor mongering" on the

The only sensible conclusion, in the view of most observers, is that the premier would have left the hospital for the Senator Jackson meet ing if he had felt up to it. That he didn't, on the face of it, is the surest indication that he is not only ill but perhaps rather

COSMIC 'BURP' HEARD

DALLAS (UPI) A group of U.S. and Italian scientists may have detected with apparatus deep in a South Dakota gold mine the birth of a neutron star near the centre of our galaxy Jan. 4.

The scientists believe they observed four bursts - or "burps" - of antineutrons. If the scientists are right, they were the first ever recorded. Each lasted about one millionth of a second and there was a little less than onethousandth of a second between bursts.

Dr. Ervin Fenyves of the University of Texas at Dallas, scientists from the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Torino, Italy, are involved in the project, which uses a 4,850-foot shaft of the homestake gold mine near

CALGARY (CP) - Shell Ca nada Ltd. and Shell Explorer Ltd. expect to spend $85' million in the next nine years on oil sands tests in the Peace River region of northwestern Alberta, says a technical paper delivered at a heavy oil symposium in Maracaibo, Ve-mist specializing in real estate says affluence may be a large part of the problem.

Statistics on starts of housing construction show the rate is below last year's and most people in the industry say reports for June and July will show a sharp decline.

The Economic Council of Canada's projection of housing need said there should be an average of 242,000 starts a year between 1973 and 1976. The total for 1973 was 268,500, was an improvement of 18,600 over the 1972 total.

During the first quarter construction was proceeding at an annual rate of 288,000 starts but in April the situation took a turn for the worse as the annual rate for the month was 256,600.

D. B. Kirkup, research-director with A. E. LePage Ltd., a Toronto real estate firm, says he expects mortgage loans approvals to de-cline by 60 to 75 per cent during the second quarter.

He predicted that the shelter component of the consumer price index will be in-creasing at an annual rate of about 15 per cent by the end of the summer unless something is done.

And, he predicts the rate of housing starts will drop to 215,000 for 1974.

Lalonde also says he expects problems for the industry if tight credit condistions continue.

Many economists predict that credit conditions will ease later in the year and Lalonde said the industry can bounce back reasonably quickly if conditions change. "We've had the tap on oney turned on and off

What About The Biggest Necessity Of Life?

The cost of keeping a decent roof over your head. The necessity that takes the biggest part of your income. The one that's probably going to hurt more than all the others combined as inflation accelerates. How much more is "home" going to cost you next year? In two years? In five? Think about it.

The Time To Protect

If you don't own the place you call home, you're at the mercy of inflation. The cost of renting has to at least keep pace with the cost of living. So every day you rent, you're unprotected. The smart thing is to make a move to protect yourself. Inweediately.

So You Want That Pool? So Read On-And Beware

June 15 was opening day for the swimming pool that was built by our friends and neighbors, the Jenkins. They could be forgiven their pleasure in the event, particularly so now that they hate it. I offer their little story today as a public convict. service. There is no extra charge.

It wasn't exactly a status symbol, you understand, even if It wasn't exactly a status symbol, you understand, even it those of who were invited to the opening chose to see it that way. "Capitalist swine," cried we all, diving happily into its heated depths. Tom Jenkins simpered and accepted the compliment with every show of good grace. The thing cost at least $5,000 or about twice the original estimate. Tom was not at all hesitant in admitting that the bank owned at least the deep end.

The opening was a complete success, four other adult couples being invited. A bottle of genuine champagne, imported at great expense all the way from Kelowna, was smashed against the diving board. When, as planned, it refused to break we drank it very quickly. Some of the guests floated about on rubber things. I did my famous jack-knife, which registered 5.5 on the Richter Scale at the Dominion Observatory. All in all it was a grand day.

That, as I say, was the 15th. It wasn't until the 16th that the Jenkins began to realize that what they'd acquired was not so much a swimming pool as a human magnet.

Overnight they awoke to the astonishing realization that they had become the most popular couple in the entire community. People they'd not seen in months — in years, in some cases — suddenly came to call and to gather up'the threads of broken friendships.

One couple, with five children, were, in fact, complete one couple, with tive children, were, in fact, complete strangers and apologized profusely for not having formally welcomed the Jenkins to the area (that was five years ago) because they were such close neighbors (only 14 miles away). They brought a pie that had mould on the rim.

"You must have a dip while you're here," Tom said, in his then kindly way. There then transpired the amazing coin-cidence that mother, dad and the five children all just hap-pened to have their swim suits in the car. Not to mention an assortment of beach balls, towels, scuba equipment and other gear uniquely suitable for the afternoon they subsequently

As it turned out an incredible number of these visitors As it turned out an incredible number of these visitors were the bgarers of small children, all of them of that breed so common in the summer months, the child who, anywhere within 50 yards of any swimming hole, will contrive a cunning method of falling in and instantly drowning.

A fast call to his insurance agent produced the sobering intelligence that the Jenkins' bore full, fiscal responsibility for the fragile lives of these tykes, each of whom might be worth $1.95 to its parents, but were valued at up to a million by actuarial estimate

In no more than three days Tom had begun to wear the haunted, haggard look of an overly-sensitive lifeguard and was taking lessons in mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. A lifelong love for the human race was clearly beginning to curdle.

At this point his problem was simply that he didn't know v to say no, a deficiency caused by his feeling that a man with a swimming pool is in a privileged class and to deny it to the less-privileged is something less than an act of charity. This is what comes from being a Unitarian, But as the crowds grew into hordes, drawn to this blue oasis like thirsty Bedouins to a watering hole in the desert, his attitude began

One couple, with three small children, had parleyed a nodding acquaintance into a full 10 hours beside the thing and were talking seriously about a moonlit dip, so Tom reported to me, when he called out in a terrible voice, "Time to drain the pool, folks, everybody out!

The valve was turned. With something akin to a death rattle, the pool began to be emptied of its contents. The un-welcome guests, after a final plunge, departed. Tom and his wife stood there in the gloaming, alone at last, as the water slowly drained away.

That was just three days ago. The word has spread as quickly, it seems, as it did before. The stream of visitors is no more. Though the empty pool now offers intriguing possi-bilities for an even ghastlier death no children have been around to fall into it.

The plan is to refill it very quietly some moonless night and to swear us all to an oath of secrecy, but beyond that I really don't know what the Jenkins have in mind. I don't seem to have been around there much since they drained the

Price Hiked For Beer Deliveries

Latest victims of inflated operating costs are the beer drinkers who order their brew delivered to their door

Greater Victoria's only beer delivery service, Pacific Brewers Distribution Ltd., has hiked its price from 50 cents a delivery to 50 cents for each case

The firm delivers between

'I remember two years ago we used to get our beer delivered free, then suddenly it was 50 cents no matter how much beer you wanted delivered, and now it's 50 cents a case — that's $3 extra an order for me.'

"It's the old story of infla-tion," explained the delivery company's general manager, Archie MacBride.

"It's too early for criticism or a drop in deliveries following the increase," he said, "but I'm expecting it. There are a lot of elderly people in Greater Victoria, some of them depend on that case of Greater Victoria, stout per week Pacific Distributors, said, had considered discontinuing the service altogether because of increases in operating costs, but "those elbecause of derly people who are pretty dependent on a case of stout had a lot to do with our decision to continue the delivery.

The increase doesn't affect the pensioner who only orders one case, he pointed out.

live mortar bomb in his nets.

The unidentified lisher man's tension began Saturday afternoon when he hauled in his nets and the bomb aboard his boat, Miss Jean, about 40 miles west of Tofino

He radioed the Rescue Coordination Centre at CFB Esvessel to the scene.

Sunday morning, the fisher-man was told by bomb experts he had netted a dud.

An armed forces spokesman said the bomb weighed between 200 and 300 pounds, was 31/2 feet long and about a foot wide. It is believed to be a practice mortar which may en shot into the area during military exercises.

His team beat the Netherlands 2-1 Sunday to gain their first World Cup championship in 20 years.

Schoen, who led his team to the runner-up spot in England in 1966 and third place in Mexico in 1970, said his Mexico in 1970, said his team's underdog rating had its advantages.

He said the Dutch "regarded themselves as favorites even before the final was played."

What Schoen called "fighting spirit and the will to win," overcame what had been called the soccer wave of the future as played by the Netherlands.

That wave looked over-po-wering in the first minute when the crowd of 80,000 saw Johnny Neeskens send his Dutch team into the lead on a penalty kick. Then, 24 minutes later, Paul Breitner tied the score, also on a free kick.

Cruyff, frustrated in his own attempts to score, twice set up Johnnie Rep in the closing minutes. Both times Rep's shot flashed wide of the post.

Britain's bookmakers made Nicklaus a 5-1 choice in the field of 154 players who will compete over four rounds on the Royal Lytham links beginning Wednesday.

The odds on Nicklaus improved after the wind, gusting in from the Irish sea, dropped to a mild breeze over Lytham's 6.822-yard, par-71 course — a place of treacherous traps made immortal by the late Bobby Jones.

Gary Player of South Africa and American Johnny Miller rate as second choices at 8-1, with Americans Lee Trevino, 10-1, and defending champion Tom Weiskopf, 12-1, next in line.

Tony Jacklin, the popular British star who conquered Royal Lytham in 1969 and shot to international prominence as a subsequent winner of the U.S. Open, was listed as a longshot.

Based on a pilot project in Phoenix, Ariz., the Alberta program started in 1970, the first of its type in Canada.

Persons convicted of impaired driving, refusing to take a breath analysis test or When I talk about failure to pass the test may be ordered to participate in impaired driving, I know the the program by a judge as a condition of probation. Avoid Drab Monotony In Planning a Hedge

Summer is the ideal time to look around for suitable tree and shrub material for growing into a hedge.

First the gardener must decide the purpose of the hedge; is it to mark property boundaries, to mask a view not compatible to the garden, or to make a background for the gar-

Ideally a thoughtfully planned hedge will do all these things, a good enough reason for spending time in summer to choose material. In fact, it might improve the approach if the word screen was substituted for hedge.

word screen was substituted for hedge.

On a home garden lot it is rarely satisfactory to plant a row of the same kind of tree or shrub for the complete length of a lot nor across the end of a lot. The reason is that every gardener wants a fast growing hedge or screen, very dense and thick because of some isolated point outside the garden which is an annoyance.

The roots of such a hedge, if it is laurel for instance, are sure to encroach on the garden area robbing it of food and

Its dense bulk and uniformity of color make a laurel hedge confining and oppressive to the view as a background for other plants.

Berberis of various colorful species are lovely in foliage and flower, but devastating to work around. The sharp spines make weeding a painful chore in the early years if it com-poses a complete hedge. The same remarks apply to holly when grown as a hedge.

A hedge usually implies training in the early years and A nedge usually implies training in the early years and trimming two or three times annually thereafter, but by substituting the word "screen" we are free to consider more than one kind of plant thereby contributing as much to the garden design as to the screening effect.

Using this method, one laurel may indeed be ideal at a point where density is wanted and its root area will be limited and not expected to grow another shrub needing a rich soil.

The same applies to the berberises and hollies; their use as single specimens in the screen planting contribute winter berries and foliage color, Their spines will be endured philo-sophically since there is only one of them.

sophically since there is only one of them.

Escallonias are shrubs, usually evergreen, with flowers of pinky white, rose or scarlet. They grow reasonably quickly, yet are easily controlled in size.

Summer Mockorange, the very fine double Philadelphus Virginal, grows to five or six feet; a lilac or two for spring color and fragrance; and several species of hydrangeas offer differences in foliage, shape and texture and as many variations in shapes of flower heads — all these are possibilities. Even the globular pink or blue hydrangeas may find a place at intervals in the screen.

On the garden side where a shrub such as lilac or forsythia blooms in spring with nothing especially attractive in forsythia blooms in spring with nothing especially attractive in foliage, a smaller shrub such as the hardy Fuchsia riccartonii enlivens the scene again by later summer; or the golden Hypericum patulum Hidcote begins to open its showy blooms in July.

An occasional small tree as Red-maple or Sargents'-crab adds a little height at strategic points.

No monotony here; no hedging; but a gentle, pleasant screening as part of the garden design.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

PREDATORS KILLING MORE B.C. CATTLE

KAMLOOPS (CP) - Cattle ranchers in the Interior say they're being hard hit by predators killing their cattle they want the provincial government to pass legislation ensuring compensation for

The B.C. Cattlemen's Association says a survey indicated that almost 600 cattle were killed by predators, mainly wolves, cougars, bobcats and coyotes, in 1973, a 400-per-cent increase from 1972 estimates. Henry Blazowski, secretary-manager of the association, said ranchers in the Peace River, Chilcotin and Bulkley Valley areas have been especially hard-hit, with one Chilcotin rancher estimating that 85 per cent of his calves were killed by predators last year.

Blazowski said one reason for the increased kill may be the lack of deer, natural prey for predators, caused by the large numbers killed by hunt

Inflation

LONDON (UPI) - U.S. Secretary-of-States Henry Kis-singer and British government leaders agreed today it is urgent that billions of Arab oil dollars should be chan-nelled back to the West to help fight inflation, U.S. ofcials said. They said the oil crisis and the economic problems stem-ming from it for the West were among the principal topics discussed by Kissinger in a day of talks here.

"There was complete agree-ment of views on the necessity of dealing quickly with the energy crisis," U.S. officials said.

They said the question of channelling Arab oil money back to the West was "one of the most important aspects' of the discussion.

Pubs in No Hurry to Change

The new wave of liberalized liquor laws in B.C. has caused barely a ripple in Victoria's pubs and it may be a long time before any real changes appear in the city's drinking habits.

So You Want That Pool? So Read On-And Beware

June 15 was opening day for the swimming pool that was built by our friends and neighbors, the Jenkins. They could be forgiven their pleasure in the event, particularly so now that they hate it. I offer their little story today as a public service. There is no extra charge.

It wasn't exactly a status symbol, you understand, even if those of who were invited to the opening chose to see it that way. "Capitalist swine," cried we all, diving happily into its heated depths. Tom Jenkins simpered and accepted the compliment with every show of good grace. The thing cost at least $5,000 or about twice the original estimate. Tom was not at all hesitant in admitting that the bank owned at least the

The opening was a complete success, four other adult couples being invited. A bottle of genuine champagne, Imported at great expense all the way from Kelowna, was smashed against the diving board. When, as planned, it refused to break we drank it very quickly. Some of the guests floated about on rubber things. I did my famous jack-knife, which registered 5.5 on the Richter Scale at the Dominion Observatory. All in all it was a grand day. servatory. All in all it was a grand day

That, as I say, was the 15th. It wasn't until the 16th that the Jenkins began to realize that what they'd acquired was not so much a swimming pool as a human magnet.

Overnight they awoke to the astonishing realization that they had become the most popular couple in the entire community. People they'd not seen in months — in years, in some cases — suddenly came to call and to gather up the threads of broken friendships.

One couple, with five children, were, in fact, complete strangers and apologized profusely for not having formally welcomed the Jenkins to the area (that was five years ago) because they were such close neighbors (only 14 miles away). They brought a pie that had mould on the rim.

"You must have a dip while you're here," Tom said, in his then kindly way. There then transpired the amazing coin-cidence that mother, dad and the five children all just hap-pened to have their swim suits in the car. Not to mention an assortment of beach balls, towels, scuba equipment and other gear uniquely suitable for the afternoon they subsequently

As it turned out an incredible number of these visitors As it turned out an incredible number of these visitors were the bearers of small children, all of them of that breed so common in the summer months, the child who, anywhere within 50 yards of any swimming hole, will contrive a cunning method of falling in and instantly drowning.

A fast call to his insurance agent produced the sobering intelligence that the Jenkins' bore full, fiscal responsibility for the fragile lives of these tykes, each of whom might be worth $1.95 to its parents, but were valued at up to a million by actuarial estimate.

In no more than three days Tom had begun to wear the haunted, haggard look of an overly-sensitive lifeguard and was taking lessons in mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. A lifelong love for the human race was clearly beginning to curdle.

At this point his problem was simply that he didn't know how to say no, a deficiency caused by his feeling that a man with a swimming pool is in a privileged class and to deny it to the less-privileged is something less than an act of charity. This is what comes from being a Unitarian. But as the crowds grew into hordes, drawn to this blue oasis like thirsty Bedouins to a watering hole in the desert, his attitude began

One couple, with three small children, had parleyed a nodding acquaintance into a full 10 hours beside the thing and were talking seriously about a moonlit dip, so Tom reported to me, when he called out in a terrible voice, "Time to drain the pool, folks, everybody out!"

The valve was turned. With something akin to a death rattle, the pool began to be emptied of its contents. The unwelcome guests, after a final plunge, departed. Tom and his wife stood there in the gloaming, alone at last, as the water slowly drained away.

That was just three days ago. The word has spread as quickly, it seems, as it did before. The stream of visitors is no more. Though the empty pool now offers intriguing possibilities for an even ghastlier death no children have been

The plan is to refill it very quietly some moonless night and to swear us all to an oath of secrecy, but beyond that I really don't know what the Jenkins have in mind. I don't seem to have been around there much since they drained the

More than 200 cars, some of which are shown below, bearing an estimated 600 people turned up for a drive-in church service Sunday evening at the Hillside Shopping Centre.

The three-quarter-hour service was conducted by Emmanuel Baptist Church, which will hold it each Sunday at 8:30 p.m. until the end of August.

Pastor Norman Archer, who gave the 10-minute message at the service, said the numbers were unexpected. Next week the public address system will be improved because people on the outer fringes of the gathering had trouble hear-

U.S. Customs Court today ruled that President Nixon exceeded his authority in 1971 when he imposed a 10 per cent surcharge on all imports in 1971, and ordered all money collected in the fourmonth period to be refunded.
